Credit and Evaluation at NID MP

National Institute of Design, Madhya Pradesh

Credit and Evaluation responsibility at NID MP

1. The Credit and Evaluation task at NID MP is carried out by the following bodies made up of the given individuals:
 - (i) The Credit and Evaluation Committee
 - (ii) The Credit and Evaluation Cell
2. The Committee consists of the Administrative Officer, Academics Office (who is also the convener of the committee) and 6 other faculty members, one of whom is nominated as the Chairperson of the committee. The Committee is entrusted with the following mandate:
 - (i) Guide the Credit and Evaluation Cells for successful deployment of the system.
 - (ii) Monitor adherence to the Credit and Evaluation System and periodic evaluation of the same.
 - (iii) Propose changes/modifications for improvements required in the system from time to time.
 - (iv) Bring awareness among students, faculty and staff at NID MP for the Credit and Evaluation System and its modalities.
 - (v) Organize and conduct orientation programmes for students, staff and faculty.
 - (vi) Formulate documentation of Credit and Evaluation System in the form and also web content.
3. The recommendations of the Committee are processed through the Academic Advisory Committee. The cells have the following mandate:
 - (i) Preparation of Curriculum Flowcharts / Annual timetables for all academic programmes in the C&E System.
 - (ii) Programme-wise registration of students and courses.
 - (iii) Assigning student batches for each course and programme.
 - (iv) Scrutiny and finalisation of individual course assessment forms.
 - (v) Timely follow-up of course evaluations.

- (vi) Issue of notification to the students who fail in an individual course / Jury and the students whose SGPA / AGPA falls below prescribed norms of the previous Credit and Evaluation Policy.
- (vii) Finalisation of Jury Panels in the Credit & Evaluation software in consultation with Activity Chairperson, (E & T) and Discipline Leads.
- (viii) Ensuring smooth use and running of the software across all Jury Panels, if required extending support to the Jury members in this regard.
- (ix) Generation of course reports, jury reports, annual reports, transcripts and other reports as applicable.
- (x) Prompt communication of reports to the students, Discipline Leads, Academic Offices, Centre Heads and Deans.
- (xi) Data Processing for Discipline branching out from Foundation Programme.
- (xii) Generation of periodic performance report
- (xiii) Ensuring secrecy and full security of the data and the system.

I. Credits system at NID MP

4. NID MP follows a credits-based evaluation system.

5. 'Credits' are a quantitative parameter associated with courses, that simultaneously indicate a) the relative importance of those courses with respect to each other, and b) the amount of study time that is expected to be devoted to those courses by students. They are supposed to be a unit of academic currency by which work in various courses in a programme can be compared to and traded with each other. To maintain parity with international academic convention, a course is assigned one (1) unit of credit for every 15 hours of teacher-guided work engagement it requires from the student.

6. NID MP's way of handling courses is to do them in sequence, one course at a time, undivided attention to every course. Students are therefore immersed in only a single course at any time and are expected to give their day's entire time to the current course alone. Counting 6 hours as the typical duration that a teacher can give per day to a class (side-by-side with other responsibilities in research, project consultancy, and administration), a course that runs for a week (5 working days) would count for 30 hours of teacher-guided attention from the students. If 15 hours count towards one credit, this weekly dedication of 30 hours equates to a student earning 2 credits for the course per week.

7. For design project courses, where the student is expected to apply all learning from every course to the project chosen, the student's time involvement is expected to be much larger. The expectation is that the student matches the 6 hours that the teacher spends in guidance, with another 6 hours of own productivity, or at least produces work of quantity and quality that would come from such time dedication. Design Project courses therefore are weighted to reflect expenditure of 60 hours of work per week or the delivery of corresponding results, earning the student 4 credits per week. This implication of course category upon course credits is reflected in Table 1.

i. Course categories

8. Based on their nature and methodology, all courses offered in a particular programme are classified into 5 broad categories (abbreviated as indicated):

- (i) Skill (SK)
- (ii) Theory (TH)
- (iii) Studio (SD)
- (iv) Research and Field Work (RW)
- (v) Design Project (DP)

9. The credits that courses of each category carry and the required minimum learning hours for each category is listed in the table below:

Category (Code)	Credit factor	Learning hours per week
Skill (SK)	2	30 hours
Theory (TH)	2	30 hours
Studio (SD)	2	30 hours
Research&Fieldwork(RW)	2	30 hours
Design Project(DP)	4	60 hours

Table 1: Course categories and credit factors

10. In the flowchart and the timetable of each programme, the category and credit units are indicated against each course title.

11. As explained above, courses of Design Project category are deemed to be twice as important as others since they are the courses in which the student applies all the knowledge and skills learnt in other courses. They therefore carry a credit factor of 4. Courses of all other categories carry a credit factor of 2. Students are thus expected to spend an additional 30 study hours every week on Design Projects.

ii. NID MP's Grading scale

12. NID MP's grading system utilises a combination of letter grades and numeric grade points whose correspondence and significance is given in the table below:

Letter Grade	N	D-	D	D+	C-	C	C+	B-	B	B+	A-	A	A+	S
Numeric Grade Point	0	1	2	3	4	4.5	5	6	6.5	7	8	8.5	9	10
